The application of Mesdames Mary Jones, Elizabeth Jones and Mararet Higham for the appointment of the first mentioned as guardians of William J. The climate is well adapted to the successful culture of the following kinds of fruits, viz: Apples, pears, plums, prunes, cherries and even peaches, and apricots have matured here during last season, showing the season to be longer than generally known. A SENSATIONAL ABDUCTION.

Geo. Duff Foreibly Takes Possession of His 18 Months-old Child.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 8 .- Until today Mrs. George Duff was a happy and contented mother in the possession of her bright-eyed little girl of 18 months, but now she is heartbroken and alone, for the little child was torn from its mother's arms by the father and carried away.

Mrs. Duff was walking near her home in east Cheyenne when she was acost ed by a man who at first she took to be a stranger, but when he spoke to her and demanded the child she recognized him as her husband with whom she has not been living for some time. Mrs. Duff did not have time to utter an objection, for her husband seized the little one, dashed down the street to the next corner, entered a closed carriage, spoke to the driver and the vehicle soon disappeared.

Mrs. Duff's screams soon attracted a crowd and the carriage with Duff and the baby speeding toward the Colorado line was pursued, but the kidnapper had secured a big start and was not overhauled. He is now in Colorado and will probably return at once to his home in Omaha.

George Duff was formerly employed n the motive department of the Union Pacific at this point, but was trans-ferred to Omaha about a year ago. A few years ago he married a well known Cheyenne girl and they appeared to be very happy. Eighteen months ago a child was born to the couple. Nothing was known of the family troubles until recently, it being alleged that Mr. Duff wanted his wife to live with him in Omaha but that she objected. It is also said that she ran away from

WARBLES OR GRUBS IN CATTLE

The veterinary department of the Kansas Experiment Station, at Manhattan, has issued the following builtin on warbles and grubs in cattle, under date of February 9:

"Recent observations made and reports received by this department indicate that prevalent. In some instances they are reported to have caused the death of young cattle.

"Warbles or grubs are the larval form of the ox bot-fly or heel-fly (Hypoderma lineata). The grubs or warbles are noticed as little lumps or bunches just beneath the skin of the back. Directly over each warble there is a small pore or openng in the skin through which the grub breathes.

"Life History.-The adult heel-fly or warble-fly is a little larger than the common house-fly. In the latter part of the summer she deposits her eggs upon the hair of cattle in the region of the heels. hair of cattle in the region of the heels. The animal licks the part and the larvae are taken into the mouth. From the throat or guilet the small larvae bore their way through the tissues until they locate beneath the skin of the back, where they increase in size quite rapidly so that the lumps are large enough to be noticed by the latter part of December or early in January. In February or March these larvae or grubs work their way out through the small hole in the skin, fall to the ground, burrow into the dirt or litter, pupate, and some weeks later transform

"In 1895 it was estimated that 60 per cent of the cattle in Kansas were affected with warbles, and the financial loss by damaged hides was estimated for the United States at from 5 to 6 million dollars. Grubby hides are usually 'docked' about one-third.

"Warbles are more prevalent in the western part of the state and attack young animals more severely than older cattle.

young animals more severely than older cattle.

'As the adult flies do not travel far a cattle owner can free his herd pretty well from these pests by treating at this season of the year. If other cattle in the immediate vicinity are affected, the adult flies will travel far enough to infest neighboring cattle. All cattle owners should unite to destroy this pest.

'Treatment.—Treatment should begin as soon as the warbles are noticed upon the animals' backs. Most of the warbles or grubs can be destroyed by putting turpentine, kerosene, crude petroleum or mercurial olutment in or on the opening through the skin directly over the warble. If the opening is very small, it should be enlarged by using a smooth, pointed stick. A machinist's oil can having a slender nozzle furnishes an excellent method of applying the medicine. By running the cattle through a chute, they can be treated quite rapidly. They should be examined in about ten days, and any that escape the first treatment should be destroyed by a second; or better, squeezed out and crushed or they can be created out and crushed or they can be created. destroyed by a second; or better, squeezed out and crushed; or they can be crushed beneath the skin by pinching the lump, or killed by inserting a pointed wire or large blunt-pointed needle. It is important that any grubs squeezed out or escaping nat-urally should be destroyed or they will transform into adult files."

LOSS OF CHICKENS BY MITES.

We are just arriving at the season of the year when those who raise poultry for profit expect to get valuable returns from their hen investment, which they feel will reimburse them for the time and money spent in carrying their stock of poultry through winter. While this expectation of profit is productive of a very comfortable feeling, at the same time a overtaken with disease before their success is assured.

With amateur poultry fanciers nearly all the mortality among their flocks is credited to the dreaded disease called "chicken cholera." and in many instances the diagnosis is carrect. But in the majority of cases the cause of the fowls drooping and dying is an over dose of mites. It is astonishing how many there are who confound mites with chicken lice; herein lies a great deal of the touble. Mites are insect so small as to be only discernable after close examination to those with the best of eyes, and de not, as many suppose, stay continuously on the fowls. Of course birds which are compelled to roost where mites are to be found in abundance, would naturally have some on them when they leave the roost in the morning and carry them all day, which accounts for the miserable irritating sensation experienced by perday, which accounts for the chirch along sensation experienced by per-irritating sensation experienced by per-sons after handling a fowl that has been roosting in quarters infested by these roosing in quarters infested by these pests.

The tendency of mites is to stay on the perches or the siles of the hen house through the day and swarm over the chickens at night, fill up their little hides return to the perches and sleep off their gorge. It is this habit or the mites which delude so many people into thinking it is lice causing the trouble among their flocks, for the reason that when the birds are examined if they have any lice they are readily seen. But with the mites, which is the real cause of the trouble, it is the very reverse; the majority of them are in the hen house, and the few that are on the birds are not discernible. The course pursued by lice is very different are on the birds are not discernible. The course pursued by lice is very different from that of the mites. Whenever lice leave one animal or bird to go to another, it is when the animal or bird so infested comes in contact with another of its kind, unless they are in such overwhelming numbers as to be scattered all over. Under these elementaries as animal or bird.

unless they are in such overwhelming numbers as to be scattered all over. Under these circumstances an animal or bird would get them without coming in direct contact with those infested.

Cleanliness being one of the essentials to successful poultry raising, too much attention cannot be given to it. It is necessary to disinfect a hen house at least every two weeks, which means the roosts should be painted and the sides of the house sprayed with a "lice killer." With such precaution, lice and mice are exterminated and the health of the chicken insured. There is no doubting the necessity of proper feeding but unless a hen is provided with clean quarters she will not thrive. More filth is allowed to accumulate in some chicken houses than would be tolerated in buildings occupied by any other kind of stock. The reason for such neglect in the poultry department by people who are considered particular is beyond explanation. Every one who has given the matter any thought must know that filth will breed vermin and disease, and either one of these will breed failure in the poultry business. Pure air will purify the blood; the result from impure air is the very reverse; it produces plood poison and ultimately death. It is impossible to ventilate a hen house sufficiently to carry off poisonous odors which arise from the filth that accumulates beneath the roosts. The very best feeding will not offset the harm done chickens that are compelled to breathe the atmosphere produced by such surroundings. Under such conditions fowls become listless and unprofitable, which is quickly followed by disappointment and failure. To be successful with poultry, clean quarters are absolutely necessary.

A good lice and mite destroyer will very unleste must are not to the nuisance caused.

cessful with poultry, clean quarters are absolutely necessary.

A good lice and mite destroyer will very quickly put an end to the nuisance caused by these pests. Therefore we recommend the use of preventive measures rather than to undertake their extermination after they are thoroughly started. These little chicken thieves have been the cause of more loss to the poultry raiser in fowls and profit than anything else he is called upon to fight. All lice on the fowls should be exterminated before the hatching season, which will prevent the small chicks son, which will prevent the hadding season, which will prevent the small chicks from becoming infested.

Now is a good time to start to do the thing right, and ever keep in mind that "The pen is mightler than the sword," but not "mite-e-er" than some old hens. but not "mite-e-er" Nebraska Farmer,
